

What People are Saying About Reston Becoming a Town...

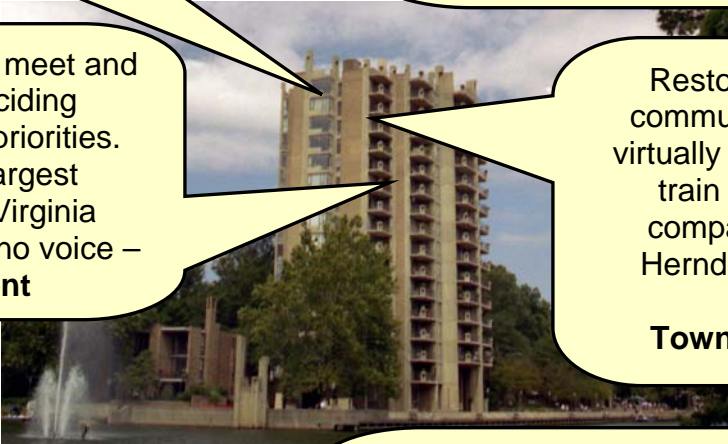

We have many newcomers every year who don't know the difference between RA/RCA/RCC, etc. There is no town hall where you can call and get all your answers right away –
Tall Oaks Resident

With all the predicted residential and commercial development and a projected population of 65,000 in 2015, I don't see how Reston can manage all the issues that will ensue without having a central government –
Town Center Resident

I was shocked to realize that the Town Center is separate from the Reston Association. Becoming a town would unite us, and help us promote Reston, preserve its values and protect its resources and interests –
Lake Anne Resident

Shifting our homeowners' assessment to town taxes will make those payments tax deductible on both federal and state income taxes –
Hunters Woods Resident

Governments in the region meet and play a major role in deciding important issues and set priorities. Reston, although the largest community in Northern Virginia except for Alexandria, has no voice –
Lake Anne Resident

Reston, the 14th largest community in Virginia, was virtually ignored during Metro train discussions when compared to the town of Herndon, a much smaller community –
Town Center Resident

Reston's problems need specific attention unlikely to come from a county with a wide array of interests having nothing to do with Reston –
South Lakes Resident

Reston is very diverse and complex, with challenges and opportunities needing more attention to solve than a simple homeowners association is equipped to deal with –
North Point Resident

Learn more at: <http://go-resTOWN.org>